Tory plan to benefit women and elderly

By Oavid Wood Political Editor

The essential strategy of Sir Keith Joseph's Social Security Act, 1973, has been retained in a policy paper on pensions pub-lished yesterday by the Conser-vative leadership. It is argued that it will be of first importance after the general election to reestablish the Joseph principle of a state pension, review-able at six-monthly intervals, and the growth of sound occupational pensions schemes hased on employer-worker cootribu-

Sir Geoffrey said in London yesterday that since the 1973 Act was passed there had been a great surge in occupational schemes to provide secondary pensions. But for the Government's decision, benefits in existing schemes would have heen improved; millions more workers would have heen covered by a funded pension for the first time, especially manual workers and women. But for the destructive decision of the minority socialist government", he said, "this scheme would have started next April. It is now, tragically, too late to meet that date. We shall act to ensure that the scheme will start not later than April, 1976." Meanwhile, important benefits would he lost to widows and dependants.

Sir Geoffrey repeatedly insisted that a funded pension was always going to be prefer-able to the rosy pension prospectuses of politicians when they talked about the state scheme. Secondly, be wanted to see more resources switched Court Travel.

discouraging to the investment of pension funds, but he still thought such investments were sounder than any "Castle in the air", based on nothing more substantial than the priming presses of a future generation.

In the words of the policy aper: "The Conservative paper: Ine Conservative commitment to properly funded occupational pensions is huil upon foundations that are as firm as any that can be identified. fied in the economic uncertaln-ties of 1974."

If the 1973 Act was imper-fect, it still stood as "the quickest possible way of laying a firm foundation for future developments". But the pace of progress would depend upon the restoration of a healthy economy, and a real boost to investment could be expected from the increased funding of pensions schemes.

would soon lead to better provision for women's pensions, perhaps some flexibility in retirement age and pension rates, and abolition of the earnings rule that penalizes pensioners who want to go on working.

The paper, in effect, counters the announcement by Mrs Castle. Secretary of State for Social Scrvices, of the Government's decision to put the 1973

Act in a pigeon-hole.

Sir Geoffrey said in London equal to those payable for a man". The right would also he established for a woman to admitted to a pension scheme run hy her employer.

The paper comments on the "substantial arguments" for a more flexible retirement aga for men as well as women, but cautiously notes that a Conservative government would not rush into changes, because the purpose of the scheme would he frustrated if it were changed in such a way as to increase substantially the num-her of people retiring at any age before they had made adequate savings for a second pension and adequate contributions to their basic state

Sir Geoffrey suggests that one improvement might be to make changes in the second pension scheme so that a woman who works until she is 55 would be granted the right to the same pension as a man if she has an equal contribution record.

Secrets of Rockefeller fortune to be revealed

From Patrick Brogan Washington, Aug 21

America is about to learn the answer to one of its favourite questions: How rich are the Rockefellers?

It is already quite clear that the various committees of the House of Representatives and House of Representatives and the Senate are going to examine Mr Nelson Rockefeller's financial position with great care when they consider his nomination for the vice-presidency.

Tha Governor, as he is universally known, seems resigned to the prospect. President Ford's total possessions, down to the last cent, and all his tax returns for the past decade, were exposed to the public when he was confirmed as Vice-President last year and there is no chance that Mr Rockefeller will escape.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr, his father, had five sons and ona daughter. Among them they have over 40 children (Mr Nelson Rockefeller has six) and the way the fortune is spread

The Du Pont family may be even richer and the Mellons as rich, but they have nothing approaching the glamour, public interest or political weight of the Rockefellers.

Mr Ferdinand Lundher, author of The Rich and the Super-rich, estimated that in 1964 the total "financial punch" of the Rockefellers was about $5,000m. The stock market has not been doing well this year and some of the family holdings are prohably worth no more now than they were 10 years ago.

On the other hand oil, tha is more profitable than ever. So is real estate, and the Rockefellers' own great tracts of the island of Manhattan with a value now rather greater than when it was first on the market.

Mr Callaghan appeals to unions for £500,000 and active help in election campaign

Labour Correspondent
Mr Callaghan, the Labour treasurer, yesterday launched an appeal to the trade unions for £500,000 for a general election campaign.

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth
Affairs made his appeal at a gathering of about a hundred senior union leaders at the TUC's headquarters in London. He urged wealthy unions to put up more money than they did for the Fehruary campaign to meet any sbortfall from tha less prosperous unions that might have exhausted their political funds for the year.

Mr Callaghan's plea was well received by the unions. Many emphasized the need for the Goveroment m he kept in power. Mr Jack Jones, general secre-tary of the Transport and eneral Workers' Union, said the unions thought that the Government still had much unfinished work to do. He listed political priorities that Labour should adopt in the general election. They included bousing, higher pensions and tougher controls on prices. He said pre-sent measures on prices bad proved inadequate.

There was general agreement among the union leaders that the Government had fulfilled its promises made in Fehruary. Mr Jones insistad that the initiative should not be lost.

Increases in pensions that had been "upset" by the increased cost of living should be maintained at their real value, be said, and he called for a firm commitment from the Government on a date for a referendum on the EEC.

"Their policies of confrontation came to a head in their Industrial Relatious Act, and utterly failed", he said. "The Tories are foracasting that the social contract between the Labour Government and the unions will fail, but they bave nothing but unemployment to offer in its place.

Mr Hayward, the party's general secretary, said Labour would ignore the siren calls to enter into coalition politics.

"Except in wartime, where there is one supreme national objective clear to all, coalitions are a recipe for inaction", he said. "The next election will ha fought on Labour's policies to get us out of the mess created by the last Tory government.

New Act: The Commission on Industrial Relations and the office of the Chief Registrar of Trade Unioos and Employers' Organizations will be abolished on September 16 when the Trade Union and Labour Relations Act comes fully into force (our Lahour Correspondent writes).

Mr Foot, Secretary of State for Employment, yesterday published a commencement order which brings the remain-ing provisions of the new legislation into effact on that date. The National Industrial Relations Court was abolished when the Act received the Royal Assent on July 31. Some of the CIR's functions will be continued by the Con-

Mr Prior said that Britain could get a higher standard of life for everyone only if those who worked in industry, commerce and services could find a way to cooperate more effectively in producing wealth. Commenting on Mr Jeokins's statement, 18M said: "We regard trade union merber-ship as a purely personal matter. We neither encourage nor discourage it.

Mr Jenkins announced at a news conference in London that his union had formed a "hroad alliance" with the National Union of Students to eradicate "academic sweat shops" in universities and colleges where, he said, postgraduates were employed in demonstrating and lecturing jobs at appalling rates of pay.

Britain's 45,000 posigraduates would be able to join his union fur a nominal membership fee of 50p a year (ordinary ntem-hership costs £10). In return, the union would negutiate better rates of pay and conditions of service for postgraduates. The offer applied also in students whn accepted vacation jobs. If there was a strike the students would be expected to take part and would be compensated for loss of pay.

Decision later in case of Maria Colwell's mother

By a Staff Reporter The fight by the mother of Maria Colwell, the child who was heaten to death by her slepfather last year when she was seven, for cusmdy of her son aged five months was postponed yesterday at Wood Green Juvenile Court. The magistrates made an interim care order, the fourth, on the haby, pending the full hearing of care proceed-the application of Mr Adrian Brumley, counsel for Eofield Borough Council, because a woman police witness was taken ill the night hefore and could oot appear. The application was not opposed by Mr Ronald Daultry, counsel for the mother, hut, he added: "I will not attempt to disguise the dismay of my clieot. We had hoped matters would reach a conclusion today."

The mother, who said after wards she wants to keep the baby, now heiog looked after at a council nursery, has 10 other children, of whom eight are in care. Maria Colwell's stepfather is serving an eight-year prison sentence for man-slaughter.

State call to revive 'cottage hospitals'

The revival of the English cottage hospital was signalled vesterday by a government call for the development of "cnmmunity hospitals" to provide less-specialized care for people

Mrs Castle, Secretary of State for Social Services, and Mr Morris, Secretary of State for Wales, said in a memurandum to health authorities : " We are convinced that we must strengthen the roles of the family doctor and other community services in the care of patients." The change of policy iodicated in the memorandum was first announced by the last govern-ment. Although the memoran-dum differentiates between the cottage hospital end the com-munity hospital it can be read as a reprieve for local hospitals which have served their com-munities for decades.

The memorandum said com-munity hospitals were needed "10 provide medical and nursiog care, including outpatient, day-patient and inpatient care, for people who do not need the specialized facilities of the district general hospital and cannot he properly cared for at

At a preview yesterday of the new length of motorway, a direct high-speed link between the outskirts of Liverpool and the West Riding, it was dis-closed that drainege installed on the historic Chai Moss peat bog will probably improve hundreds of acres of surrounding pntential agricultural land.

The road traverses part of the great moss between Manchester and Liverpool, an obstacle to travellers for centuries, which was crossed with great difficulty in the 1830s by George and Robert Stephenson when they built the world's first fully equipped passenger

Instead of laying miles of brushwood and hranches over the peat, as the railway builders did, the motorway contractors excavated three million tons of soft, wet peat to find firm foundations to deep cuttings.
A 7ft diameter drainage pipe has been installed with an cutfall ioto the Manchester Ship Canal. The drain has been connected to Cbar Moss dykes hull hy generations of farmers and Mr Rooald Greatrix, resident engineer of the North Western Road Construction Unit, says it should lower the water table throughout the area, tous making more laod workable.

The excavated peat was spread on farmland hought by the contractors, the Sir Alfred McAlpine/Leooatd Fairclough consortium.
Mr Greatrix said: "The excavation was very tricky. The peat was like porridge, or some-times vegetable soup. When we htoke the crust it jumped at The stretch of notorway closes another gap in the net-work around Manchester and links with the M6 north-south artery. It should take much traffic off the existing east Lancashire road, which had a high accident record and was part of the 1930s plan for a direct rood from Liverpool to Hull. By 1976 the M62 will provide the link he tween the two ports.

Syria's 'friendly' talks in London

By Our Diplomatic Staff Anglo-Syrian relations appear to have successfully weathered the diplomatic incident last month when Syria protested against alleged British interference in its policy towards its Jewish population.

This was the impression given after a meeting in London yesterday henveen Mr Abdul Halim Khadam, the Syrian Foreign Minister, and Mr David Ennals, Minister of State at the Foreign Office

Last month Syria warned Britain that its "interference" in Syrian affairs could endanger hilateral relations. The warn-ing came after British diplomats in London had conveyed to the Syrians British concern over reports of persecution of Jews in Syria.

The talks yesterday touched on the subject of Syrian Jews but there were no new develop-ments. The fact that the discussions were described as "friendly and cordial" was taken as a sign that hilateral relations had not been impaired by last month's incident.

The ralks also covered economic, commercial and cultural relations. There is a desire by sides in increase trade. British husinessmen were well represented at a dinner giveo by Mr Ennals for Mr Khadam on Tuesday.

The Middle East situation was also discussed. Mr Khadam emphasized the need to main-tain the momentum of talks aimed at reaching a settlement of the Middle East problem. Syria would welcome British participation in the Geneva peace talks.

The question of possible British arms sales to Syria was also hriefly mentioned. Mr Ennals explained that Britain was prepared to coosider such requests so long as the arms requests so long as the arms would not endanger the achievement of a just solution of the Middle East conflict.

Mr Khadam invited Mr Ennals to visit Syria. The invitation was accepted in principle although, in view of the likelihood of a British election in the autumn, no dates were fixed. The last British minister to visit Syria was Mr George Thomson in 1965.

From London Mr Khadam is going to Washington for talks with American leaders. His visit there is a follow-up of the one paid by Mr Nixon, while President, to Damascus in June.

Racial interests give life to a relaxed election in Malaysia

Kuala Lumpur, Aug 21

Myths of mortality

io find yourself reading a genninely original work, straight from the Pierian spring. He writes out of himself, not as the scribes. Within Seitdzhelilov, among Tatars deported to central Asia by Stalin in 1944, returnad to the Crimea from Uzbekistan last May and hought a house there. the confines of no more than 236 pages, be enumerates and illuminates the various myths whereby man throughout the ages has expressed his imagination of the meaning of bis own mortality. In so doing, Dunne has produced a book which speaks directly and authoritatively to an age dangerously devoid of any coherent idea of the relation of death 10 life. He argues no special case and rides no hobby-borse. In-stead, he assembles the facts and distils the essence by a selective process of trans-historical comparison and association of images and ideas, as when he contrasts Lincoln's Gettysburg speech and the funeral oration of Pericles. The book exhibarates because of these brilliant juxtaposi-tions. The reader finds himself startled into a new appraisement of tha history of his death. "The nature of a society, it could be argued, is decided by

"If I must some day die, whar can I do 10 satisfy my desire to live?" The author, John S. Dunne, is Professor of Religious Studies at Yale. Hence you may he somewhat surprised to find yourself reading a characteristic form. Has one long since made the choice which Dunne says Odysseus made when Calypso offered him immortality—to prefer to devote one's life to exhausting the possibilities of the finite than to attempt to consort with the heing of the infinite? Is there any possible intermediacy between eternity and time? Is Dunne right when he tells us that of all the solutions which man has found in his long quest for life, there is not one that has fully satisfied his desire to prolong his life indefinitely upon earth?

The book has something of the character of a great fugue io which the main theme keeps recurring in various acresting statements. The coda is contained in a last splendid paragraph which opens thus:

From the oge of lite gods to the age of God, from the gods of the living and the gods of the dead to the living God and the dead God, the city of man has remained the city of the gods.

The theme is the question bebind all the questions in the city of man today. "Who shall set us free from this death-dominated life?" The Silken Net Ry Melvyn Bragg becker & Warburg, 12.75) This is an ambitious book, with some sharply-defined dramatic scenes which make one wish that Henry James' "foul fieod, Excision" had been allowed to get at the rest of the manuscript. A womao, at first all loving and giving, misses marriage with a cousin already engaged when they fall in love, and marries instead a rougher diamond, deroted to ber. The promise of fulfilment, tentatively grasped dies fairly speedily, and we are invited to helieve that the gradual sexual isolation which forces her busband into an affair with a much younger girl, and eventually into desertion, is connected with Rosemary's need of something-more than a reasonably boppy life in a flat above a well-kept and profitable country pub.

Well enough. But what she needs is apparently "art", love of which she thought she saw in ber dim cousin, and later sees in his son (with whom she discusses the philosophy of Gide over a half of hiner). She is the woman at whom the BBC directs such arts programmes as the one Mr Bragg has recently and so successfully cently, and so successfully, presented. He discussed the problem of addressing her in a recent article in *The New Re*view, and it would be surprising if the problem did not form the germ of the novel. But in the novel one needs either more or less evidence than he allows us: either the full-out Lawrentian approach, or a Hugh Walpole gallop. Hnw Walpole would have loved this plot!—balf-Freoch heroine, plot !—balf-Freoch heroine, tough hut noble working-class hero, "sensitive", weak semi-hero just off-stage. He would have produced a hook quite as long, or longer, the Cumberland setting more fully exploited, the characters broader; and overall with the bonus of his marvellous talent for narrative.

One certainly misses the sense of story, here; the prose is muddied, and muddies the plot. The writing is also often careless: Rosemary's uncle and aunt "girded themselves to their familial dunes", only to find that "her charm and talents bowled them over". That kind of awkward juxtaposition is repeated more than once. But more worrying is the fact that the story is in its exteriors an extremely naive one, in which the author faces head-on the daoger (the necessity?) of heing acotimental. In the final paragraph, Rosemary discovers a terrible illumination between the dark before birth and the dark after death, and the dark after death, and feels "a deep and tender plea-sure fill her eyes". Bringing down a final curtain like that would not bave worried Hugh Walpole for a moment, and one would have happily accepted his vague gesture, inferring the meaning from bis very manner. For a novelist from whom one moments—such plots—present the difficulty that they can only he justified in terms of the evidence. That evidence is here smuoged by insufficient psychological insight into the leading character, and weighed down by words, words,

The Footballer, by Derek Dougan (Allison & Busby, £2.50). Micbael Parkinson, said Derek to be writing a hiography of George Best, will no doubt cast a wary eye over this oovel, for refute it—though it does in fact. its hero, Daony Stone, is a socrer super-star who at the peak of his career disappears from Branton United after quarrels with his manager and girl-friend to London, and only emerges to hold a press conference at which he is unable to explain wby his lifa, apparently a dream of success, now so bores and emhitters him.

Derek Dougan makes the reasons for Stone's actions oute clear; while the construction of his hook is predictable, even to the fudged ending, and the olioor characters are thinly drawn, his bero's story is credible and moving, and holds the interest of a reader to whom professional soccer is as nointeresting as it is impene-trable. A first novel dealing with the stresses and delights of the author's own occupation Considering the narrative flair and the easy, unstrained dialogue, it will be a pity if that turns out to be true io this case.

Cassidy, hy (André D Maggie Deutsch, Kerouac £1.75). Written nver twenty years ago, Maggie Cassidy looks hack to Kerouac's hoyhood, in a rather selfconscious senti-mental overblown recollection of a young French-Canadian snowhalling through the streets in a gang of footballing friends, loviogly living at home, and muddling through adolescence. "lost impossible chorus girls of eternity dancing slowly io our minds to the mad ruined tambourine of love and hope". Adventures of a catcher in the rye as a young dog. For Kerouac fans, here is bis powerfully sentimental joy at the process of living, the lively freshness of the football-field. street corner scenes and the first love which fixed Maggie (or Mary Carney) as Jack Duluoz's (and Kerouac's) lost ideal of domestic bliss.

Derek Parker

The Gate of Eden, hy William Corlett (Hamish Hamilton, £2). A first (and promising) novel on a familiar theme a boy growing up, whose husy parents, running a shop, have little time to get to know him. He finds a friend in Tom Falconer, an old man who lives in the woods as a recluse, with a faintly unsavoury reputation as "Looney Tom". He is a former school-master, who lends the hoy books, talks to him, writes bim letters at school, and takes him seriously. Parents are disaporoving, first girl friend openly hos-tile, and the pains and embar-rassments of adolescence are neatly conveyed, together with its touching idealism and openheartedness.

Operation Splinter Factor By Stewart Steven

(Hodder, £3.25)

I am not convinced by this book, and since the author pro-vides no evidence to support refute it-though it does, in fact, contain some factual errors. What Mr Steven claims is that the wave of sbow trials and terror which swept across eastern Europe before Stalin's death was masterminded by Mr Allan Dulles of the CIA, who hoped that it would so discredit the communist regimes that the people would rise up in revolt.
As it turned out, wheo people did rise up somewhat later they were put down, but there is no evidence that the show trials had much to do with it. Many ordinary people were totally indifferent to whether one lot of communist leaders was putting another lot in prison. Mr. Steven, who was on the Daily Express and is now on the Daily Mail, admits that the alleged plot did not work but insists that there teally was a plot. Its key figure, be says, was Jozef Swiatlo, a deputy head of department in the Polish security police, who defected to the west in 1953. Mr Steven says he was a double Without five established players, without any of the style which made them champions. Leeds United fell to their second defeat of the new season through an unsatisfactory foorteenth-minute goal from Gerry Francis. So Brian Clough's introduction to Elland Road proved a major disappoinment for him and the ebampions' supporters. Above atl his side lacked authority in the penalty area, but it is a change of character, iodeed, to see a Leeds side outfought.

Rangers, who lost their centre half Mancial, early in the first balf and were without Bowles, were well organized and aggressive. Although two players were showed qualines of application in the season and undergrand united.

ts probably the one which lntikhah would choose to try to break the spell. This is as good a Pakistan side as there ever has been—better by some way, t think, than the one which won their one formus ticlory—and the pitch today should suit them. As a Surrey player, Intikhah knows it as well as anyone. He expects it to be full of runs to start with and to turo for his three wrist spinners later on, more readily than for the finger spio of Underwood and Greig.

beels and darted away from all opposition.

Yet perhaps it was too early to have passed such comment. The words turned to ashes in nne's mouth as Burnley turned the match upside down to pull back the second half and earn a creditable draw, helped by two magnificent saves by Stevenson. Burnley have a habit of doing well at Stamford Bridge. Indeed, they have woo if times there since the war and only four years ago pulled back a cup if on this ground when two goals down and only eight minutes teft. minutes test.

These Lancastrians, in fact, seem to like Loodon for I remember a hrilliant match egainst Totteoham Hotspur in the early 1960s, when both clubs were at their beight and Buroley at White Hart Lane on that occasino went so far as 10 pull back a 4-0 deficit after the interval. But all that is long ago end a sheikh who was at Stemford Bridge last ought in full tegalia must have felt than he had struck oil with six goals laid out on the table for his cotertainment.

Here was a match of natural values. Chelsea in the first balf played some swift, incisive foothall on the ground with Cooke. Hay, Hollins and Lincke at the back—guarding the dangernus James brilliantly—in fine form. Burnley at thet point were made to look trail in defence, wet a pulse heat in the match which was gay and full of attack. Before the end the fates pulled the plug out not Chelsea and they went home looking solemn, baviog thrown away two soft goals in the first quarter of an hour alter the interval.

This was only part of the night's entertainment. After five mioutes

The dinghies planed quickly away to the leeward mark, which was dead to leeward, requiring several gybes along the way.

The most direct course was steered by Hawker and he led st the end of the round and for the rest of the race. Read-Wilson and Dick Jobbins tussied for second place for a couple of ronods, but were eventually separated by Ian and Keith Gray (sailing together) on the second running leg. Rogers gains easy victory

Jim Rogers in Vega won the third race in the Flying 15 national championship to give him some consolation for breaking his boom when leading the previous race. The 64-strong fleet oo Straogford Lough started in a light wind, with Rogers, Tom Connor, Eddie Magee and Tom Ratcliff making the best use of a backing windshift to lesd round the first mark of the Olympic-type course.

Rogers and Connor were safely established as first and second for the test of the race. However, Ratcliff suffered from a hout of spinnaker trouble, and on the second beat. Magee suffered (like msny others) and was passed by two previous champions and windshift experts. Percent Renwere in

Revolution keeps clear of rest of fleet

The duels on Monday and Tuesday between Revolution and Super Zonker were not repeated in yesterday's third Hornet world championship race at Brightlingsea.

Malcolm Goodwin and Julian Lord in Properties and the state of the st in Revolution led from start to finish, helog able to keep clear of the fleet of 56 boats throughninsh, helog able to keep creat of the fleet of 56 boats throughout.

But Duncan and John Nicbolson in Super Zonker, after an indifferent start, began to get through the fleet and later successfully challeoged Martin and Griffiths in Something Completely Different for second place. This meant that the Nicholsons kept contact with Revolution, now in the overall lead. Several protests went to the protest committee after the race, but oone affected the six leading hoats.

think that Peter Walwyn had left something to work on on English Prince following his coit's lay-off, caused by the virus, whereas Bustino lonked particularly hard and fit to run as if his life depended upon it.

Certainly Patrick Eddery did not subject English Prince to a hard race once his cause was lost and it was interesting to bear him say later that in his opinion English Prince will beat Bustino in the St Leger. For all that, Bustino won well. He is a thorough stayer and unlikely in my opinion to be brushed aside easily in the fifth and last classic, for which he is now favourite at prices that vary and last classic, for which he is now favourite at prices that vary from 11-8 to 6-4. The three-quarters of a length, by which he was adjudged to have beaten Girandole at the finish, bore little or no relation to his superlority. All credit, though, to that gallant old warrior, Petty Officer, who made a truly brave attempt to carry 10 st 1 lb to victory in this of all races. He ran a marvelious race to finish fourth under that welterweight.

Who was the tuol of the racing world in 1855, have between them won 15 races. Something a little short of £20,000 will go to the owner of the winner of the Gimerack, and I think this big prize will go to Mr S. Weinstock with the American-hred colt, Auction Ring, trained by Dick Hero, and the mount of Joe Mercer. Auction Ring cost $35,000 as a yearling. In his handsome appearance he looks worth every cent of that big dollar outlay, and in his two races he has won at Newmarket and Newhury in a style which prompted Joe Mercer to remark: "A very good colt indeed, possibly as good as I have ever ridden."

Mercer has been associated for over 20 yeara with many good two-year-olds, Brigadier Gerard being, of course, the best, and although wisely he draws no comparison between the speed of Auction Ring and Brigadier Gerard, he observed to me last week at Ripon that it would take a very fast two-year-old to prevent him from winning his first Gimcrack Stakes on Auction Ring.

Paddy Preudergast has won three Gimcrack Stakes, and there is much confidence in the stable and among those who live near to the Curragh that It's Freezing will the Curragh that It's Freezing will gain his third successive victory and remain unbeaten. Four champions denied British title By Lewine Mair

By vesterday evening, the junior golf champions of Scotland, Wales, England and Ireland had departed the British girls' championship at Dunhar.

Suzanne Cadden, who will repre-sent Scotland at senior level next month, hit several damaging tee shots to lose on the home green to a fellow Scot. Yvonne Slean. Lisa Isherwood, the large and likahle Welsh girls' champlon, west out at the I8th to Ann Daniel of Mill Hill: and Christone Laog ford lost ar the 20th to Lynne Harrold, the girl she had beaten by 2 and 1 in the final of the recent English junior champlooship.

Two up with three in play. Miss Langford pulled her tree shot up against the wall flanking the green at the short 16th and lost the hole to a three. The 17th was halved in four and Miss Harrold drew levet when she got down in two from a green-side hunker at the 18th. After a couple of fives at the 19th, Miss Harrold, a fall, athlenc girl who simply radiates determination, played a glornous little chip to within 3ft of the hole at the 460 yards second to close the match with a birdie.

like my old wooden one, have to admit that the metal ones with stainless steel blades are more efficient—sn much so that I have succumbed and bought one. Actually, it looks very smart too, with its dullish, silvery fioisb. The cuttiog edge of the blade is slightly serrated which ob-viates that occasional sticking I get no the flat-edged blade of my old one. In fact, this metal version is so sharp that you really do have to watch your fingers—but they are at risk with all the hest kitcheo tools and knives. If you love dressing thiogs up—especially salads—with raw onions and carrots as I do, this mandolin is for you. If you cook them, this is for you. Cucumbers can be finely or thickly sliced for serving a la Grecque. Potatoes also, for oven or pan cooking. In fact, I slice a great many things on a mandolin, and the steel one

Consistent if arbitrary view

Assembly Hall. Edinburgh

Irving Wardle

Molière in English at the Assembly Hall: past visitors to Edinburgh will shudder at these words; and it says much for the now sadly depleted Actors' Company that they succeed at least in holding the fort: this is not a production to be named in the same breath as tha Nanonal Theatre's Misanthrope, hut it contains some first-class playing and a consistent if arbitrary view of the play.

Peter James sees Tartuffe as a comedy about the magneticism of Versailles, showing a gullible provincial newcomer heing devoured by a sophisti-cated shark. This may fit in with Molière's later plays, but it is not what he wrote in Tartuffe. Guthrie's maligned National Theatre production, with its patrician Orgon and humpkin parasite, was closer to the truth the frath.

But having settled on his reading, Mr James goes ahead. Orgon's family have come up from Wales and are husily improving themselves. Mariane walking with a book on her head is taking posture lessons; and young Damis (Juan Moreno) is only happy when striking fencing positions. The family are all prone to impetuous rages and all prone to impetuous rages and sulks. Sheila Reid's complacently sensoal Elmire is the exception: evidently she is a post money second wife. Apart from her, cone of them knows how to treat a covere with the how to treat a servant, with the result that Paola Dionisotri'a rampaging Dorine practically rules the household. A few careless flicks of the duster and she is away, hauling the squahhling lovers together and digging her flustered employer in the ribs amid shrieks of derisive laughter.

Even after this, the long-delayed entrance of Tarmffe is a shock. Molière builds him up in great detail: a destitute outsider, as excessive in gluttony as in bigotry, who would disgust as in higorry, who would disgust any wife and plunge her into provincial darkness. The image rakes the shape of a ravenous dung heetle. The figure of Charles Kay then steps forward, trim as a silver-fish, unctuously mellifluous, and favouring his hearers with a radiant smile: the very reverse of expectation.

Right or wrong, it is a brilliantly skilled performance based on the character's un-shakable confidence and his capacity to dominate through passivity. Repeatedly Mr Kay is left motionless observing the frenzied stir he has created a balcony, his transformation is around him. In his first declara-chilling: his red dressing gown

However, the performance does not answer the question of why Tartuffe takes Orgon in and nobody else. Indeed, the scheme breaks down altogether in the relationship with Windsor Davies's Orgon, a bearish nonentity who leaves a gaping hole in the centre of the production.

The company handle Richard Wilbur's uneven translation—part wittily resourceful, part part wittily resourceful, part point, and then makes his true exit at e run, throwing his hat in the air; at which point Anglo-Saxon comedy ascends into Gallic joy.

As the two Thomases, Dylan and Wynford Vaughan (no relation), walked out of their Swanzea school in the middle of one morning the Headmaster stack his head out of the window and asked: "Where do you think you'te going ?" "We're going for a game of billiards in the Elysium Billiards Room ", replied Dylan, with perfect withfulness. "Oh, you wicked boys I" cried the Head! "I hope you get caught ! "

Jolyon Wissaurst's produc-tion strove its give Winford some visual relief by divising it into scrapbook sections and by repeating in pictures—not always corroborative—what the Talk had just told us in words. The was hardly necessary. Remarkable though it is to learn that Welsh choirs still perform "Maityrs" of the Arena", lengthy shots of them doing so in 1974 had little to do with Wynford's story of how he and his brother crept through the grass to discover and hring hack the secret of a rival choir's "interpretation" the day before the contest. The choirmaster received the returning commendes with turning commendos with sacred joy. Raising his eyes grandly to Heaven he said (what else?): The Lord has delivered them into our hands!"

Martina Arroyo, Fiotemza Cos-sotto, Luciano Pavarorri, Raf-faele Arie. Of these, Miss Cos-sotto dominated, which was not always as it should be. Herways as it should be ther voice is rarely very beautiful, but there is plenty of it, it is exceptionally even over two octaves, and it has an unusual cutting power. She sang the "Lacrymosa" with much feeling. The "Agnus" was less bappy, for ber octaves with Miss-Arroyo sounded edgy and uncomfortable.

Miss Arroyo herself was in noble voice, with long spacious lines and great tenderness io the "Lihera me". There was some pure, accurate and apparently almost effortless tenor singing from Mr Pavaretti ; if Mr Arie's voice seemed smaller end slightly constricted, the tone was aptly sombre, the phrasing thoughtful end imaginative. The LPO accompanied with plenty of vitality and provided some dis-tinguished solo wind playing.

Hoddinott's eight-year-old third piano concerto, where strict of the essence. Hoddingto often seems here, as in other works, to be living his music thought by his searching direc-tion and thus persuaded his players constantly to reassess a work they must often have tackled in the past, even though many of them are young. That prodding quality was expropriately most to the fore in the Finale where Beet-hoven swerves from key to key on a knife edge of nervous tension. Even in the third movement, a seemingly reflective Nocturne, you feel that at any moment something may go bump in the night. In the other three movements incident and energy abound with some startlingly effective chenges of mood, yet not enough explora-tion of given material, as though the composer were sometimes afraid of boring us even for an

At a fine when abstractions heve singularly little power on our stage, Mr Duncan sets his study of the corruption of a state ruler "nowhere, anywhere, and everywhere simultaneously" (I quote his programme note). This means that Richard Napper puts his young actors in rights and T-shirts.

Beethoven's An die ferne Geliehte is prohably the earliest sons-cycle to be composed, and oo Tuesday it was coupled with one of the most recent examples of the form, Richard Rodney Bennett's Tenebrae, which had its premiere. The Beethoven is written in a styla which in some respects anticipates the romanness of a generapates the romannes of a generation or two later, and one that he did not majorain for long; it is found in the Piano Sonata. opus 90, in the first movement of opus 101, in this cycle—and then was abliterated by the cataclysm of the Hammer-klavier Sonata.

Most of the songs of opus 98 are in the manner of abstracted reveries and as such very hazardous material with which to begin a recital. Barry McDaniel, with Aribert Reimann at the piano, was indeed unduly tentative. His voice is a fine one and the line was: shaped with many interesting variations of stress and colour, but the interpretative ideas were less explicit than Beenhoven requires, even in this regregful mood. It is hard not to feel, also, that this cycle is better served hy a tenor then by a harmone like Mr McDaniel, as it is at times rather high.

Both artists, in fact, were more confideot on the un-familiar ground of Bennett's Tenebrae. A dark pessimistic work, this consists of five settings of Sixteenth and tings of sixteenth and seven-teenth century verses which all take human transience as their subject. It is, indeed, a sequence of lements, io which the keyboard is at least an equal partner. The piano com-mentary—behind the voice and in ioterludes between verses— is particularly strillion in the opening piece. Thomas Nashe's opening piece, Thomas Nashe's "Parewell, earth's bliss", and while in the second Henry King's "Like to the falling of a star ", it murmurs softie, it still finds the unexpected notes. The vocal melody in these and the other songs is angular, effortful, meaniosfully awkward, and was sung with much feeling by Mi McDamel.

Bennett finds no encourage. ment for aprimism in the words of "Hey nonny no", as the jagged keyboard part emphasizes, but the atmosphere is at its darkest in Tichbourne's "Written on the eve of execuverse of which is elmost claustrophobic. This, in fact, is a powerful work, releasing more emotion than we cowadays expect from this composer, and after the Interval Schubert's C major quintet, played by the Cleveland Quartet with Ke Iwasaki, afforded apt relief.

It was not until after tha 1970 election Few there are still, who will, that it became apparent to for example, embrace the those who had strongly supported Selsdon—and even more so Mr Heath's Carshalton ported Declaration of 1967, in which he denounced incomes policies as not only unworkable hut, of their oature, unjust—that the Conservative leader had merely regarded right-wing economic policies as one of a set of options available to him, rather than as a tried and accurate political philosophy.

Ponishing thriftlessness

The resultant reversal of November, 1972, when Mr Heath announced his dramatic the Conservative Party that its present leadership, deliherately, excludes the right from who had earlier supported was a shattering blow to those who had earlier supported him. It was all the more so hecause, associated with the idea of halencing the national hudget—of the nation not spending more than it earns— are two ideas thought to he

These are the idea that politicians should always tell the people the truth, and not try to conceal from them with gimmicks the essential fact that any inflationary situation cannot he ended, especially when matters have gone as far as they have now, without con-siterable hardship for all but the most vulnerable elements of the community; and the idea that thrift should be rawarded and thriftlessness punished.

On the hasis of this last idea Tories oppose taxes on savings and wealth, but they also oppose most forms of indus-trial subsidization, in the helief that the true wealth—or poverty—of the nation is some-thing that can be defined only hy government operating a sys-tem of economic management which comes as close as is reasonably possible to that of the free market. The Heath government did not, it is true, tax wealth: but their subsidizations were gross.

It is still novel to suggest that truth is palatable to the electorate, though the suggesrepresents a

When about six years ego, I House of Commons's Public in democracy than does the "it is not politically possible." effect that the incomes and response to the monetarist prices cootrol schemes to attack oo inflation frequently put forward by the men of the middle (such as Mr Bernard Levin). However, the raising of the issue of the moral content of right-wing Tory policies and programmes brings us to a pos-sibly more important emotional issue—that on which the right is divided—namely member-ship of the EEC and the question of whether a referendum should be held which would allow the people to decide whether they wanted to con-tioue our membership or not.

The Labour Party as a whole, and the Tory right, ara both in deep division on this matter. The centre, whether Tory, Labour or Liberal, remains convinced—we are speaking now of what used to he called the political nation, the informed, the politicians, and the commentators—that Mr Heath's treaty of Brussels represented a good deal for Britain; and not a few on tha Tory right agree.

The nationalists, on the other hand—and most of the right, as well as nearly all of the further left, are nationalists of one sort or enother are convinced it was had. All of those on the right who are convinced of the importance of the hattle against inflation, are disturbed by this division over Europe, especially at a time when, however disappointing is the conduct of the Tory leader-ship, their argument about the causes and cure of that inflation appear to be getting home.

It remains to be seen whether a compromise can be worked out in which the pro-Markat right, and perhaps some of the centre, maintain-ing their existing beliefs about the Common Market, can also agree to acceptance of a referendum, on general democratic principles.

Such a coalitioo, if it could he agreed, would serve three purposes. It would unite the whole of the right, not only on a common policy, hut on a common philosophy, national and truthful

It would greatly increase the forcefulness of the right, at a time when opinion is turning their way on economic matters. And it would compensate for the disavowal of right-wing ideas by Mr Heath and most of his senior colleagues by providing for the public a policy which, though it might have certain harsh effects in the economic sphere, would rest on a total truthfulness towards the public, and a total trust of the alectorate.

Why the mischief that was Watergate London's must not be forgotten

Some rather odd creatures have crawled out of the woodwork to defend Mr Richard Nixon since his resignation. It was to be expected. Mr Nixon fought his way to the top by articulating the fears and prejudices of the American extreme right and the frightened. He savaged decent opposents from Jerry Voorhis to Adlai Stevenson. Nevertheless, it was a surprise to see that Mr John Sparrow has joined them. Mr Sparrow is Warden of All Souls, and was a scholar at Winchester and New College, Oxford. He was called to the Bar in 1931 and practised in the Chancery Division until he joined the Army in 1939. He was appointed Warden in 1952. With a background such as this his letter published in The Times yesterday can only encourage those who are trying to create the myth that the 37th President of the United States was stabled in the back by a malignant press. This is dangerous mischief which cannot go unchallenged.

Mr Nixon was the target of some personal, professional and political vendertas. No politician who hehaved as he did over the years could hope to escape the revenge of his victims, but Carl Bernstein and Boh of his victims, but Carl Bernstein and Boh Woodward, the authors of All the President's Men, were not fighting a personal vendetta. They were young reporters who were the first to get on to Watergate, hut for many weeks could not bring themselves to helieve that the President of tha United States, and those close to him. were in any way involved.

The traosposed quotes in Mr Sparrow's letter also give the wrong impression. The casual reader could not possibly guess that they knew they had done wrong in one instance, largely because of inexperience, and were decent enough to admit it in print. As they admit in the book, "They felt lousy".

Their efforts to uncover the Watergate cover-up could have been hetter appreciated if Mr Sparrow had also quoted how Mr Ronald Ziegler, the then White House Press Secretary, announced that all previous White House statements were inoperative". In other words, the White House had lied about Watergate. Mr

One can uoderstand, of course, Mr Sparrow's objections to press coverage which might have made it impossible for Mr Nixon to receive a fair trial. This newspaper raised similar objections in a leading article at the heginoing of the Watergate inquiry. But it is important to remember, as became evident sfter that article was published, that Mr Nixon was not "assassinated". Only he was to blame for the "slow motion" of events. He could have refused to he a party to the cover-up of Watergate, or admitted his error when he realized that he had done wrong. That is what any honourable man would have

Instead, all the powers of the Presidency were misused, not only to obstruct justice but also to defame the Washington Post. The most honoured and honourable of American newspapers, to use Mr Sparrow's words, was the intended victim—not Mr Nixon. Here is what Mrs Katherine Graham, the publisher of the Post, said in a Granada Guildhall Lecture earlier this year:

"The charge of prejudicial publicity rings especially hollow in this case. The first is that it is such a selective charge. As made by Mr Nixon and his partisans, is aimed only at reports which hurt his cause. They see nothing equally pra-judicial in their own explanations, rapeated pleas of ignorance, invocations of national necessity, attacks on the ctedibility of Mr Nixon's accusers, such as John Dean, and all the other arguments employed—hacked by the force and prestige of tha White House—in attempts to win tha country to Mr Nixon's side. . . .

"Mr Nixoo has been invoking in his own defeoce all the powers and options which a President may command hut which the common cirizen cannot employ. He has, for instance, withheld evidence from the Congress and the court on the grounds of presidential privilege; he has refused subpoenas; made himself unavailable for only offeoce is a single isolated hurgiary. In fact, the offences involved comprise a massive pattern of corruption and ahuse -offences so serious, numerous and head-strong that they have shaken the foundation of public trust and confidence.

"What is at stake in the Watergate

"The issue is whether and how the people and their agencies of inquiry, the Congress and the courts, can get at the entire truth, assess the damage and work out the remedies. In short, the issuein so far as it affects the nation's most public political figure—is due process in the hroadest, most fundamental sense.

"In this cootext, the most prejudicial thing the press could do would he to cease publishing and stop broadcasting some arbitrarily chosen part of what it learns. Without a free and probing press, the eveots and import of Watergate would, in all probability, never have been revealed. Without that same thorough, persistent, independent press, public debate could oot proceed, and the clamour and clash of opinions might never he distilled into that 'deliberate sense of the com-

This is what the Washington Post, Tha New York Times and other American newspapers achieved. They did not condemn Mr Nixon. In spite of his efforts to obstruct justice, the Congress and tha courts, including the Supreme Court of the United States, did their duty as ordained by law. The House Judiciary Committee voted out the Articles of Impeachment. The majestic machinery of impeachment was set in motion.

Mr Nixon chose to resign because the elders of the Republican Party told him that there were not enough votes in either House to find him not guilty. The world sighed with relief when he went, but it might learn to regret that the process of impeachment was not completed if distinguished men such as Mr John Sparrow cast doubt on what really happened from the day the Watergate hurgiars wera arrested until Mr Nixon

Their "drop out" period has seemed a veritable nightmare to most of those recovering from mental illness when actually asked about it. In short, it is a typical wage negotiation, with examples adduced from here and there to make the best of a claim, with no scandalous exploitation to repair and no outrageous demand to resist. But in its effects it is anything but typical. While 700 workers press their claim, important provisions of the law remain available unly at second hand to those who need to know them. Some of the thirty-tour Acts have not yet come into force and some are only of very specialist inscrest, but the exact terms of others tin particular the Finance Act and the Rent Act) are of immediate concern to many. The handicaps under which Parliament was working at the end of the session as a result of the strike may in addition have left unnecessary flaws in the drafting of some enartments. If in two weeks' time the union extends its action and stops the Stationery Office's entire publishing operation, then a much wider public will dispute at the Stationery elsewhere, but there are few if tion will begin to suffer noticeaoly.

In the nature of things, public service workers are often in a positiun to disrupt the administration of the country more seriously than niost. The inhihitions that this fact used to impose have been eroded in an extent that is most strikingly illustrated, perhaps, by the persistence of some radiographers in an action where the point to he gained is ridiculously disproportionate to the dangers that have been incurred. This change of attitude is partly the overflow of a long-standing sense of grievance at the exploitation of a tradition of service, but it is to be seen in cases, like that of HMSO, where there has been no exploitation at all. But the change is to be pur down to the corrosive effect of an accelerating rate of inflation, which impels every group to seek to protect itself. The destruction the idea that the public injerest has, for those who serve it, a claim to be set beside their own interests would not be the least of the wounds inflicted on society by inflation. More care is owed by governments to make sure that the pay of public servants does not persistently fall hehind that of other workers in comparable fields. But thera must also be a readiness on the other side to acknowledge that the special nature of their work brings special responsibilities and imposes on them a duty of

The balance of power in Cyprus

From Mrs Anna Alexcieva Sir, At last it bas been acknowledged regonations over the future of their Republic should be between Greek and Turkish Cypriots (your Editorial of August 19). It must have been galling indeed for both sides to six mute after the first ceasefire while three niher cuuntries discussed their fate without inviting them to take

Regenerating British industry

From Vice-Admiral Sir lan McGeoch Sir, In condemning the White Paper on the Regeneration of British Industry as "hlindiogly irrelevant" to the country's present needs you are, if anything, understating the case. As chairman of a small (though fast growing) company providing a modest but useful service to a sector of British industry. I note with interest the Government's view that "in times of economic difficulty it is often the small businessman, dependent to a great extent on personal wealth as a source of finaoce, who suffers the greatest hardship".

t and my colleagues in our enter-prise wonder whether any of the sentlemeo who had a hand in draft-ing Command 5710 has ever been directly involved either to the direc-tion or the management of any busioess, large or small. Quite apart from the statement quoted, so typically "broad-brush", the docu-ment fails to provide either a con-"descent to Avernus", or a per-suasive argument in favour of massive bureaucratic involvement in business decision making. But then it is a political tract of our times, and must be evaluated as

Since the war (the time-scale used in the White Paper) the economic theory and social practice prescribed respectively by Keynes and Beveridge have dominated and transformed western industrial society, which was in danger of being root which was in danger of being rent asunder by slavish adherence to the doctrines of Adam Smith, on the one band, and Karl Marx on the other. Unfortunately, governments decen-dent upon the popular vote have used Keynes to promote booms instead of to prevent slumps, and Beveridge to provide a universal feather bed instead of a selective springboard.

Inflation is the result, galloping inflation. The communists, a small though highly motivated body in Britain, are neither clever nor influ-ential enough to have, on their own, brought matters to their present lumentable state in a country where freedom of speech and assembly are Still, mercifully, preserved.

Given that the Labour, Conservative and Liberal parties are all committed to operating a "mixed economy", the starting point of any delination of policy (preserved). delineation of policy augnt surely to be a definition or better still a description, of a "mixed economy". Finally, in establishing a cooperative, consultative and mutually respectful attitude at all places of work, within the various sectors of the economy, authority must be accepted as legitimate and indispensable provided that it is consututional, properly exercised within the limits imposed by the task (" the discipline of the job"), and subject readily to impartial review.

Degree status From Projessor Max Beloff

Sir, May someone with over forty years' experience of universities reply to Mrs Scott (August 20) whose experience was for hooourable reasons limited to two. She expresses surprise that the group of business leaders who wrote to you in defence of the proposals of the University College at Buckingthe University College at Bucking-bam did not give their reasons. Mrs Scott would have better been able to assess their view had she informed berself (as would have been quite easy from our published literature or by telephoning the college) as to the precise proposals we have lo mind. I can assure her that no student will leave Bucking. that no student will leave Bucking bam whatever the length of his course without being well aware that before entering into controversy, one must verify one's facts. There would then have been no need for Mrs Scott to speculate as to whether our "main aim" was to give "vocational courses", since she could bave discovered that the courses at present in question and for which the concentrated twovear pattern is thought proper are io law, erocomics and government In other subject areas our plans may be quite different.

Mrs Srott is worried lest as a sbarebolder she has been supporting an "unproved educational venture". From Mr C. P. Roberts

Sir, Those of your correspondents who have expressed convern at the refusal of the Council for National Academic Awards to validate the Buckingham courses, will probably be interested in details of a degree course which has been approved by the CNAA.

The course, for "Bachelor of Education, Part-Time Degree", is offered by three Hertfordshire colleges of education: Balls Park, Putterldge Bury and Wall Hall, together with the Hatfield Poly technic. None of these institutions, one might fairly say, is a name to conjure with in the academic world. For teachers of one year's standing the "general qualification for entry" is the Teachers' Certificate in Education. This I regret to say, is not these days a guarantee that its possessor is even Bus perbaps of even more interess in view of the Buckingham decision, are the attendance requirements and the length of the course. The degree with honours may be taken over three or four years".

Losses on livestock

From Mr Stuart Johnstone Sir, Sir James Barker says we ought to grow more of our own food. agree. Not bard to do.

Meanwhile I have started sending my breeding sows to slaughter, after 25 years of pigkeeping, as I am losing about £3 on each bacon plg produced. My neighbour is giving up 40 acres annually of sugar beer. It does not pay to grow. My beer. It does not pay to grow. My son-in-law is drastically cutting down his breeding flock of turkeys for the same reason.

The Government is trying to curb inflation, but pricing efficient producers out of the market is madness. Yours faithfully, STUART JOHNSTONE, Mole Hall, Widdington, Saffron Walden, Essex. August 14.

From Lt-Cdr David Verney, RN, rtd Sir, I feel the time bas come when the British public must be made aware of just what is happening in livestock and dairy farming in this country todey under a Labour Government, quite apart from the gift and possible wealth taxes.

Because of the appalling state they were in already, from the beginning of August farmers were offered a subsidy of £9.25 a beast on beef animals going for slaughter. The immediate effect of this has been, at least down bere in Corn-wall, that prices obtained in the market by farmers bave dropped by just this amount, so that the only person to benefit has been the sbolesaler. But even worse than this, the inspectors are only agreeing to pay this subsidy on about one in five of the beasts being sold, so thet on four out of five animals the farmer who previously had had to accept prices entailing for him a loss of about £40 a beast, is now even worse off. In dairying a major part if not the whole of the profit in rerent seven-day-a-week drudgery, as today the barder you work the greater your loss, and slaughtering of dairy cows bas increased by 4,000 a week.

If this frightening loss of profitability and of confidence in tha ability and of confidence in tha future is not put right now, before this winter, not only will the public have to rely almost entirely on imported beef but nn imported butter, cheese and even liquid milk as well, at world prices, and once destroyed it will take many years to reestablish a livestock and dairy industry in this country.

Surely food is more important than bingo, and if the Bridsh public are to enjoy reasonable prices in the future they bave got to be prepared to pay a realistic price today. Yours,

Waste paper money From Professor Ulrich E. Simon

Sir, Inflation did not meen cartloads of marks in the Berlin of 1923. It was far worse and, for a child, amusing. I bave in my possession a banknote for 500 marks, overprinted Eine Million. My collection shows that within less than one year we graduated from five thousand to twenty milliard as units of payment.

I never carried cartloads, for this system of adding noughts operated smoothly enough. Only once did I come away with more than I could carry: my father bad earned 2S United States cents which I took on an errend. Between leaving bome and getting the sbopping the dollar bad doubled in value. The change weighed down my pockets.

Another engaging feature was tha creation of Notgeld. Cities, villages, districts, and the smallest communi-ties designed their own paper money. Most of these etchings wera of the highest quality. of the public interest.
On a point of detail, it may be a pity that Mrs Williams chose to publish a long and apparently comprehensive list of services which would fall under this legislation. In the first place ir inevitably conveys, albeit unintentionally, the impression rban those engaged in these activities are guilty of some of the practices. Secondly, it may equally falsely convey the impression that services not on the list fall outside the scope of the new powers. In fact the proposal is that the powers should cover all services for all time. As such it would open a mejor new chapter in the history of British commercial law and pelled each woman who conceived to carry the foetus to term, and also effectively denied contraception to the unmarried. The new freedom to choose in thesa matters has enabled those who wish to avoid the economic burden of breeding to do so, and the fact that some have chosen this course has surely routributed to the modest decline in the natiop's birthrate that the writer finds so encouraging. More would undnuhtedly follow were it not government policy to use the public purse, in the form of tax deductions. maternity benefits, income aupolements, and child allowances, to shield those who choose to breed from the economic consequences of their decision.

Chaocellor, the trust's president, at the eod of last month, Mr Crosland, Mr Rippun's successor, said he considered a special study un-necessary at this stage. The letter was followed by an annuncement that the disputed plan for a new road tunnel under the city centre had been shelved

Mr Crosland told Sir Christopher Mr Crosland told Sir Christopher that it was Improbable that resources could be found in the next few years for the construction of the east-west rellef road. That removed the urgency from the situation and Instead the Government would be prepared to pay part of the cost of three less ambidous studies of traffic management, conservation and the consequences of restricting physical change to a minimum.

Sir Christopher and his col-leagues regard that as a piecemeal approach and argue that it would not prevent the further loss of historic buildings. An example is a row of derelict Georgian cottages in Prior Park Road which are listed

At present, after the recent local government reorganization, there is a truce between the trust and the city council, but it is likely to be broken soon by a new dispute over the proposed new law courts between the eastern end of New Bond Street and the river.

Conservationists feel that the design by Leonard Manasseh is out of keeping with the Georgian surroundings. They question the need for the law courts to be huilt in the city centre and would prefer to see the site left as a public open space.

Standstill at Chrysler makes 9,500 idle and puts 8,000 more at risk

All of Chryslet's car assembly operations to Britain bave again been brought to a standstill by labour disputes.

More than 9,500 workers in five of the American-owned company's plams in the Midlands and Scotland are now idle because of strikes and lay-offs. Another 8,000 jobs are threatened.

Yesrerday car production at the Lindwood, Renfrewshire, assembly plant in Scotland ceased, because of component shortages tesulting from strikes in Chrysler's Coventry factories. Some 3,500 workers were laid off for an indeficite period. off for an indeficite period.

It added that many companies acemed to be worried by rising labour costs, particularly through threshold increases. This supports the recent statement by Sir Arthur Cockfield, chairman of the Price Commission. that labour costs were stealing the limelight from material costs as a leading fillip

The arerage size of price increases notified fell last month in some sactors. Mechanical engineers claimed 10 per cent. almost 1 per ceot less than in Juoe. Metal manufacturers asked for 10.2 per cent, compared with more than 13 per cent in June. The average for chemicals was down from 18.7 to 13.2 per cent.

meot scheme to docks previously outside it could add between £100m and £150m a year to the country's import bill, according to the British Importers Confederation. A Confederation survey, carried out before Mr Fred Mulley, Minister of Transport, announced his plans for a sweep ing reorganization of United Kingdom port administration, showed that the cost of importing through ports operation the dock workers' employment scheme was substantially more, double io some cases, than through non-scheme ports.

Scheme ports, mainly the very large docks, employ regisered dockworkers who are taken by employers from the register, joh by job. In non-scheme ports and wbarves, dockers are employed directly by private companies.

Last mooth, Mr Michael Foot

Secretary of State for Employment, said he intended to introduce an order which would exteod the scheme to all ports.

Mr Montague Hollinsbed
chairman of the BIC, said yesterday wat Britain's most efficient ports were outside the dock labour scheme. Nationalization would reduce them to the same state as the main ports.

Because of bureaucracy and delays in cargo handling and turo-round of sbips, costs under nationalization will rise, resulting in ships being diversed to north continental ports."

tion of the ports and the setting scheme ports were rarely levied.

The survey also claimed that conscious developments as the papacea for flexible, worked faster and lost the ills of the industry. But nationalization would increase costs-by £100m a year for imnorts-with food costs going up

"Maoy of the main ports are already publicly-owned and in most cases their showing is deplorable. Cargo at these ports is subject to delays; there are strikes and stoppages and demands for extra pay from dockers."

Statistics from certain shipping conferences showed that for every ton loaded in London, 5.47 were loaded in Antwerp. Efficient non-scheme ports were managing to hold on to their share of trade but any deterioration in their working, with loss of flexibility and over-manning, had to result io loss of trade to continental ports.

The Government would be far better employed io endeavouriog to improve efficiency st Britain's main ports rather thao in nationalization—"a concept lnog out of date and no answer to today's oroblems". Mr Hollinshed said.

The survey by the BIC, which represents about 3,500 United ingdom importers, showed that husiness at non-scheme oorts grew at a compound rate of 11.5 per cent from 196S to 1970 and the growth was continuing. As well as higher costs, the survey showed that the time takeo to clear goods through non-scheme ports averaged six days whereas in scheme ports it took 14 to 20

Shipping conferences levied maoy scheme ports but, because of quicker turn-round non-

But less through pilfering than scheme ports.

The survey gave cost comparisons between scheme and non-scheme ports. Import charges for canned goods-fruit vegetables, meat and fish per 1,000 kilos in scheme ports were: Hull 53.75; Liverpool £7.90: Southampton £6.44; Glasgow £5.80 and London £7.50 to £10. Figures for ooo-scheme ports were: Felixstowe £3.67; Sheerness £2.89; Dover £2.50.

The BIC claims that the present competition between scheme and noo-scheme ports is baalthy, helps to maintain efficieocy and should remain.

"It is boped that, particularly in viaw of the economic situation of the country, no action will be taken by the Government to bring non-scheme ports within the orbit of the dock workers' employment scheme." But the record of scheme

ports was defended yesterday by Mr John Lunch, director Authority. He said the Port of London bad made a good profit this year, following profits in the last three years. Our pioneer contaioer port at Tilbury is well established as Britaio's largest and is one of the top three in Europe. It works every hour of the year. We are Britain's leading grain port, and our grain terminal holds the European record for ship discharge in ooe day. We are the leading bulk wine port io the country, having pioneered this in the 1950s."

Mr Lunch said the security Loodon docks was so good that last year losses from theft and pilferage were at the rate of 0.005p per £100 of the value

Sir, The recent case in the Court of Appeal relating to the use of the expressions "champagne cider" and "champagne perry" (H. P. Bulmer Ltd aod another v J. Bollinger SA and others) was concerned with the question wbether it was occessary to obtain a preliminary ruling from the European Court and the discretiooary powers of the trial judge in that respect. Lord Denning, Master of the Rolls, graphically illustrated the United Kingdom trade with Latin America

From the Hon David Montgomery

Sir, The sentiments expressed by Mr Richard Irving Jahn in his letter published in your columns on July 30 are of considerable interest, and are much appreciated in those circles where the subject of United Kingdom-Latin American tradiog is taken very seriously.

Canning House is the focal point in London for the promotion of Anglo-Latin American relations in both the cultural, educational and commercial fields, and has been involved in the former activities, in an ever-iocreasing degree, since 1943.

The library at Canning House, containing 50,000 volumes, is the largest and best equipped of its kind in Europe.

Group profit as a whole last year was, bowever, perhaps £1m short of most outside estimates short of most outside estimates and one is left questioning for the first time the performance of Acrow ex-Steel, where there was a profit of £3.3m against £3.1m, though that, of course, is after striking a full £600,000 interest charge on the Steel acquisition. While Acrow was apparently hardly affected by the three-day week thanks to its high exposure to preferential lugh exposure to preferential activities, it bas been having difficulties with many of its

But its turnover is 40 per cent up by value so far this year—15 per cent by volume—and if the fact that 70 per cent of its

Comainly there can be few complaints on the volume side. Market share has increased in the United Kindom in around 15 per cent—on a par with Teacher—which compares with the 55 or sn per cent of Distillers. Case sales rose in the interim period to end June by double the industry average at 30 per cent, effectively from the standard hrand with the cut-price Mackenzie not really figur-ing. But while the home market brought in £18.9m of the £22.8m sales mual, more than half the printil came from overseas, and this with the benefit uf only three munths of the extra $1-a

What has caused the daninge is the increase in borrowings and interest charges to finance the higher stock and debtor levels. The value of stocks roso by £2!m in the first six months to £14.9m, overdrafts by the year end will be around 14m higher an Ennu and dehters will be ahead by a roughly equal amount at 116m. Against this, cash flow is running at £2m.

What would help would be for the Government to put the distilling industry on the same basis as the browers in terms of duty payment. This would enleash 15!m to Bells and save the company 1825,000 in interest charges annually.

Riding on the aluminium price

British Aluminium's figures provide a clue to the 88 per cent interim profits jump at Tom Martin Metals Group. The aluminium price has been re-flecting the fact that demand has at last caught up with supply, and, since Martin merged Coley Metals with Tame Valley Alloys, aluminium bas accounted for around balf the group business.

Copper and copper alloys probably represent a further 30 per cent and, though volatile, the 1974 price has been way above the 1973 average. Stock profits do not figure signifi-cantly as Martin's buying and selling prices are based not on a forward view but on the LMF levels prevailing. So, tha prospact now of some easing in world non-ferrous metal prices points not to stock losses but a reduction in working capital. Not that Martin is too worried on that score, though, with some £800,000 of net cash currently under its belt.

The real question is whether volume demand-up to 35 per cent at Martin io the first halfwill decline markedly when engincering feels the draught of the consumer spending recession. The fully diluted prospective p/e of around 5 at 41p offers little speculative attraction and, as a relatively high quality scrap metal situation, Martin's appeal very much depends on the view one takes of engineering prospects.

Towards a fairer deal from the service industries

Auvone who had taken the precaution of reading the Fair Trading Act—and Part X in particular-uced not be surprised by yesterday's move by Mrs Shirley Williams, Secretary of State for Prices and Consumer Protertion, to extend greatly the investiga-tion of restrictive trade practices deep into the service industries.

Fortunately, those whn have been hissfully unaware that they could be bauled before the Restrictive Practices Court for illegal behaviour are being allowed eight weeks to tell Mrs Williams what they think.

Since there are well over 2,500 trade associations, many of which have long experience of living with the Restrictive Trade Practices Act, 1956, which nutlawed collective price fixing. it seems likely that their secretariats are going to be busy, buth canvassing opininns as well as explaining the significance of the statutnry notice oow published by Mrs Williams.

Put simply, Mrs Williams is making what the civil servants describe as a "call up Order" which will extend restrictive which will extend restrictive trade practices legislation to virtually all commercial ser-vices in Britain. While she has issued a long list of the broad categories of services affected, it must be understood that it is not exhaustive. Any service which is supplied in the course nf husiness is now ensnared by the law unless specifically exempled.

What is bappening is that Mr Inhn Methyen, the Director General of Fair Trading, who has taken over the old functions of the Registrar of restricrive trading pacts, must be tald of any agreements or arrange--whether they have been made in writing, or oral under-ilion in some way or another. Such arrangements must be registered, and they may (unless are abandoned amendad) go before the Re-strictive Practices Court.

The restrictions oo competi-tion are presumed to be con-trary to the public interest un-less they can be justified in terms of the gateways of the Fair Trade laws. The only potentially soft option for those affected is to hope that Mr Methveo and his staff will not take the correspond to the corresponding to the co take the agreement before the court because in their view it contains only insignificant re-

What providers of services, whether they are the local motor school or a stockbroking firm, will waot to know is what constitutes a registrable agreement. Bruadly, any two or more parties who supply commercial services and operate any restraint on the supply or buying of their services will be caught in Mr Methyen's trawl (unless, of course, they chose to break the law in the hope of not being caught, risking some stiff penalmes).

The next question has to be what restrictions make an agreement legally notifiable to be given in some dusty legal language, but they relate to the following five main restraints on competition:

1-The charges to be made, quoted or paid for designated services supplied, offered, or 2—The terms or conditions on or subject to which services are to be supplied or obtained. 3—The extent to which (if any), or the scale (if any) on which

able, supplied, or obtained.

which services are to be made available, supplied or obtained. 5—The persons or classes or persons for whom or from or from which, services are to be made available or supplied or are to be obtained. Clearly, these are rather wideranging definitions of compention restraints, and, given the proliferation of trade associ-ations all trying in preserve soma sense of order as well as soma sense of order as well as initiating collective action oo matters of importance to their sector of business life, lawyers are going to be busy combing the minute books and other documents. Any recommendation that may bave been made to a service trade oo some matter will need to be scrutin-ived as potentially illegal.

Manufacturers, and their associations, have long lived with the dangers of being hauled before the Restrictive Practices Court. Indeed, some have learnt to skate very expertly on the thin ice between legal arrangements and the murky waters of bad business hehaviour.

Since 1956 thousands of restrictions of comperition have been scrapped, while others have been varied to avoid expensive court hearings. Others bave just gone underground, posing a problem for Mr Methven in rooting out the secret collusion between companies.

There are periodic attempts to form price rings that evade the law. Many "gentleman's understandings" not to make oroducts supplied by another are known to exist. Information is often shared in ways to defeat detection. Markets get carved up vices are to be made availto oreserve orderly compension. Yet there is general agree-old Registrar did a magnificent job in exposing manufacturers and suppliers of goods—from galvanized tanks to basic slagwhom, or the areas or places in who sought to restrict competition in one way or another. Now the Government wants to remedy one hig defect of the old Act—it did oot cover commercial services. Mrs Williams, in designatiog the services she wants to be subject to registration and Court investigation, has not taken some partisan step. In fact, the Fair Trade Act was very central to the Conservative Government's bopes of promoting more competition in the economy. The Secretary of State is just triggering the mechanism of their Act to call up potentially illegal service agreements.

As a safeguard, the last Government huilt in a period when interested parties could make representations, and Mrs Williams is now a wise enough hand to ensure that the closing date of October 17 for written representations is in fact longer thao that required by the Act. A Parliamentary Order, subject to affirmative resolution in the Commons, will, after this period, begin the process of registration of restrictive pacts for Mr Methven's study.

Mr Methven's role is to con-sider which pacts materially restrict competition or are likely to cause some detriment to the public. If they do not, in his view, then be can recommend the Government not to refer them to the court.

There are, of course, some special exclusions. International sea transport services do not come in the net nor do civil airline operators. They are subject to other controls. Road hauliers covered by the Ttaffic Commissioners have certain statutory controls preserved.

Building society arrangements for fixing interest rates are safe. Also excluded is any agreemant to which the Bank of England is a party and the arrangement to monetary or credit relates policy. The City will also be partly relieved that an agreement to which the only parties are authorized by or under the Companies Act or insurance legislation will not invite scrutiny. But these exclusions still leave Mr Methven with a pretty wide-ranging brief. And it is unwise for any trader or com-mercial firm just to carry on waiting for the actual Order to go through Parliament before deciding whether they are affected or not.

Mrs Williams plans for formal registration within three months of the Order being confirmed—not much time. And it is an important point that if this is not done in this period theo any doubtful practice is clearly unlawful, not enjoying the temporary protection from any sanction provided for registered agreements which may or may not be cleared from court investigatioo.

No one bas koowo just bow widespread ere restrictive prac-tices in the service industries. Many have their suspicions. What is certain is that ragistra. tion will uncover a vast network of doubtful behaviour that bas long needed attention by anti-irust legislators. And Mr Methren can be expected to take some early cases before the court to make an example of those party to the more glaring schemes to defeat reasonable

British Leyland's battle for the heavy lorry market

Ron Ellis, the managing director of British Leyland's truck and bus division, bas devised a simple method of impressing bis work people with the growing foreign invasion of the British truck market. He sends them to the nearest motorway bridge to count the number of Swedish Volvos and Scanias and to try to spot more recent arrivals such as Mercedes, Saviem, Fiat and Daf.

"Official statistics such as market sbares are cold fish to the lad oo the sbop floor. But wheo be sees for bimself the result of those figures the whole thing falls loto perspective", says Mr Ellis.

But eveo in isolation the fi-gures make pessimistic reading for British eyes. Commercial vehicle imports have increased by 50 per cent in the past six months. In the over 28-ton category British Leyland's category British Leyland's shara bas fallen from 27 per cent to the first six mouths of 1973 to 22 per cent in the same period this year. Volvo bave maintained their 17 per cent penetration, while Scania bava slipped a point to 9 per cent. But the plain fact is that between them the two Swedish manufacturers now outsell Bri-tish Leyland in the United Kingdom market.

True, the over-28-ton sector is small in unit terms, but it is easily the most profitable and with the trend towards fewer but bigger trucks it is also the fastest growing. Despite the aver-activa anti-juggeruaut lobby, the haulage industry remains convinced that the present British ceiling of 32 tons gross vehicle weight will have to be lifted to 38 or even 40 tons if British bauliers and truck manufacturers are to gat their fair share of the buge Euro-pean road freight business. They insist that such trucks will not be bigger overall and if the heavier weight is spread over more axles will not increase the wear on road surfaces and bridges. At the same time all sections of the industry are moving—if somewhat reluctantly—to

This may explain the logic behind tha move to heavier trucks which originally let in Vnlvo some six years ago. They bad well proven trucks in the 32/38-ton sector, but it does not explain wby British Leyland took so long to produce in addition to the Swedes, the Germans, French, Dutch and Italians are now making inroads here.

Mr Ellis is nothing if not a realist. "I suppose you can say we bad it too easy when with benefit of a very strong tariff barrier for protection we took 40 per cent of the total British commercial vebicle British commercial vebicle market. It was inevitable that when the barriers started to rome down after membership of the European Economic Community we should losa some of this."

He says that, rightly or wrongly, hauliars thought they bad sound cost reason for buying Volvos. Since then a number of other factors had helped the importers. It had become the "io thing" to buy foreign. But most important of all, British Leyland bad been and still is unable to produce sufficient trucks to meet demand.

"I could divert production from export markets to defend the home market and that would be comparatively easy in the short term. But I should only do so at the expense of overeast overseas markets with enormous growth potential such as fran where we shall he selling 5,000 hig trucks in the next two years and where the long term prospects are unli-mited. There are also mouth-

Rott Ellis, managing director of British Leyland's truck and bus three years before rationalization task is com-

of black Africa and the Arab Middle East."

The simple answer of course is to increase production and that is what he is doing within tha confines of the corporation's already bard-pressed finances. He is tackling it out by the erection of vast greenfield plants such as Mercedes bave done at Worth, near Karlsrube, but by removing bottlenecks in the present

The biggest of these is dicscl eogine production. Tha restriction bere is not lack of facilitles or manpower to huild engines but the supply of castings for cylinder blocks and cylinder beads. Output at the Leyland foundry is belog somewhat reluctantly—to watering opportunities opening raised from 450 tons a week to accept that beavy truck oper-up in the developing countries 600 by the installation of new machinery. Similar work is portance of Mercedes' recent going on at Albion, in Scat-land, to increase output of axles and gearboxes.

But this is small fry when compared with the L300m which Mercedes-Benz have spent in the past 10 years to push through a complete modernization and expansion of their worldwide truck facilities

Diesel eogine production has been completely rationalized on one family of engines with the same bore and stroke. The vast Manoheim engine plant sales and service network are contains a bewildering array of going to make progress against mass productioo machioery. The truck assembly plant at Worth incorporates many car same problems in pushing into assembly line techniques and is computer controlled.

be another thrae years before he bas completed the rationaliration of his present range of are in a better supply position trucks. But he insists that the there will be one bell of a battle." complicated line up of Leyland, AEC, Guy and Scammell, built by a 30,000-strong labour force scattered in 15 major factories, is not as unwieldy as it looks.
"I don't want to fall into the trap that bas caught so many of my car colleagues whera they have over 20,000 men on a single site. Half that number is quite enough for effective supervision", be says.

The essence of model to another and from one market to another in times wbicb make my car colleagues vears, mainly because of that flexibility. Mercedes bave got to such a degree that if, for instance, oew pollutioo and ooise regulatious demand changes in engine design they will be in the soup. They are also very dependent oo European market which takes mora thao 60 per ceot of their production."

Nevertheless, be insists that he is not underrating the im-move to buy back their United Kingdom truck business from the Thomas Tilliog Group and replace it with a wholly-owned operation. "There are some very high stakes being played for here. This is the biggest commercial vehicle market in Europe, but there are too many British and foreign manufacturers trying to sell

"Only those prepared to put buge investment into estabgoing to make progress against domestic manufacturers. We Europe. The investment called for is quite frightening. > The build-up to that battle is already in evidence at Wakefield. Yorkshire, On a newly acquired 36-acre site there Mercedes bave mmad with surprising speed to establish a central import and workshop depor. Already it holds more than 1,200 vehicles—about balf the company's estimated requirements for this year.

But the key development is building is flexibility. I can a customs booded compound switch my plants from one on the same site which will ou the same site which will i itself hold 1,200 vehicles, lt. enables the Germao company turn green with envy. Tube Investments and Reynolds Metals of America have sub-staorial stakes, has made good first half gains in rurnover and profits. But the board gives B warning that profits in the second half will be adversely affected by the loss of output at the Invergordon smelter and the inability to recover all cost iocreases under present price control lagislation. Last year the group achieved a turnround from a loss of £165.000 to a profit of £3.5m Gates Shipping. Here the price is £1.1m cash.

British Aluminium, in which struck before charging extraordinary items. These arise from the continued floating of sterling. As a result the group has incurred a potential additional liability oo its outstanding Swiss loans. At the exchaoge rate ruling on July 1 these amounted to £863,000. The amount required to cover the potential loss will he provided in the annual accounts.

Notwithstanding this board have raised the interior dividend from 0.5p to 1.49p—the group is not subject to dividend control—but they say the amount of final dividend will be considered when the full accounts for the year are available and in the light of the circumstances then prevail-

Foreign Exchange

Foreign exchanges were quieter than of late yesterday and rate of our ements were small. The dollar was easier in the morning, probably as a continuing reaction from ably as a continuing reaction from its recent illuminess. But in the afternoon it was again strong and tended to close at its best level of the day in most ceotres.

The pound generally moved in line with the Condinental currencles. After upening at $2,3225, it rose to $2,3290 at its highest level in the morolog. However, it slipped back to close at $2,3225, up 25 points of the day.

The trade weighted devaluation fell from 18.1 per cent at Tuesday's close to 18.0 per cent.

Gold closed at $1351, down 51 on the day.

Discount market In the discount market yestertended towards a ourolus, hut not embarrassingly enough 10 oecessitate any operations by the authorities. With "calling" oegligible and fresh funds readily available and Iresh funds readily available houses opened the bidding in the 5 per cent to 6 per cent range. At midday there was some slight firming to 7 per cent, but this reflected only temporary unevenness and rates drifted away to close anywhere between 2 per cent and 4 per cent during a very quies afternoon. Little bill trading was reported, apart from some topping up by banks and others of "but" Treasury bills sold by the houses at 11 3-16 per cent.

INTERIM STATEMENT

Results and Dividend

At their meeting today the Directors of Tube Investments Limited considered the results of the Group for the six months ended 30th June 1974 which showed earnings for the period after taxation attributable to Tube Investments Limited amounting to £8,747,000 (23.2p per £1 Ordinary Stock). Under present Government legislation controlling increases in dividends the total dividends for 1974 will be limited to 15.602625p per £1 Ordinary Stock. Tha Directors decided to declare an Interim Dividend on the Ordinary Stock for the year ending 31st December 1974 of 7.2p per £1 Ordinary Stock. Dividend warrants will be posted on 28th October 1974 to members on the registers on 27th September

The Directors propose to introduce a Scheme to enable Ordinary Stockholders to eject to take further Ordinary Stock in lieu of cesh dividends and intand to convene an Extraordinary General Meeting to consider the necessary Resolution to introduce such a Scheme in tima for it to apply to this Interim Dividend.

An appropriata Notice and Circular Letter will shortly be sant to Ordinary Stockholders.

Comments and Prospects

Demand for the Group's products continued strong, from home and overseas markets, with the exception of homa demand for consumer durebles which weekened noticeably towards the end of the period. This weakness was reflacted in the results of tha Domestic Appliance Division which was also the chief sufferer from restricted working during the power crisis. Demend on the Cycle Division which sells more then two-thirds of its output of bicycles and components overseas, remained firm.

The Steel Tube Division's results benefited from high utilization of the increased capacity installed over recent years.

In many parts of the Group shortage of labour is a limitation on parformance. The Oversees Division maintained tha higher contribution to Group profits established in the latter half of last year.

Sales in the first half of 1974 increased by 24 per cent compared with the corresponding period of 1973 and profits before tax increased by 21 per cent. However owing to the raising of United Kingdom Corporation Tex to 52 per cent the earnings for the period increased by only 7 per cent. Since it is the earnings that provide the basis for financing the total cash requirements of e business - to provide for dividends, for investment, for axpansion generally, and to cover the effects of inflation - the heavy tax burden imposed on industry is a severe handicap. With infletion at presant running in the United Kingdom at an annual rata of well over 15 per cent tha real burden of taxetion is much heavier than the nominel reta epplied to historical accounting profits.

Profits for the second helf of the year are expected to be comparable with the first half, although the outlook is overshadowed to an unprecedented degrea by political and economic uncertainties.

Pam Wilson Joined The Times in May 1972. "After qualifying so a teacher and teaching for two years in a somewhat humdrum city! decided the bright lights of London seemed ter more ettrective. The edvert in The Times for Clessified Advertising Sales Girls was an added incentive and after successfully applying for the job I have been here for two very enjoyable years. It isn't by any means easy and one deem't always leave at 5.30, but there's a tremandous variety within the property of the pr the job which makes it all worthwhile. For instance, I sterted with 'reception' work which meens one minute I could be talking to someone wishing to edvertise his pedigree dogs and the next minute talking to a Director ot a Company wishing to sell his country mansion. From there I moved to the property team speaking to estate agents and Property Developers, and then to the Appointments telking to Personnel Menegers and Management Consultants. Now I have just been appointed ss e treiner on the Property teem. So, as you see, the job I am doing ie e reelly satisfying one, and the rewerde are good too I

The 200 series feature two new orgines, both running on cheap 93 octane fuel. The 2.7 sll-aluminium V-6 unit which powers the 264 has been built in northern France to a joint project involving the Swedish company and the French manufacturers Repault and Peugeot. On paper the unit is less powerful than the "straight six" 3-litre engine it replaces. But the drop of 20 blip to 140 is affect by hetter torque. Although it gives a lower top speed Volvo says it will give improved acceleration in town driving. Fuel injection is standard. On a short drive at the Volvo test track in Sweden this week, I found the new engine smooth, quiet and flexible.

For the 240 models, the 1986cc pushrod unit has been apprated to 2.1 litres, with overlieud camsbaft. That involves an increase in blip from 82 to 97 on the carburettar version, but the output of the new engine in fuel injection form has dropped to 123 bbp.

The other main changes, which apply to the entire range, are a redesigned front suspension, to give better ride and handling, and the introduction of a more positive rack-and-pinion steer-ing system in place of the recirculating hall method. Power assistance is standard on the 264; on brief acquaintaoce I found it admirably light but a little
